↑ STEIGER DYNAMICS LEET 3D HOME THEATER PC

It's not every day you come across a liquid-cooled home theater PC that looks like a high-end audio component. Housed in a brushed-aluminum chassis and aimed at hard-core gamers and A/V enthusiasts, the made-to-order LEET Windows 8 computer includes a Blu-ray/DVD writer and is built around Intel Core i3 or i7 processors and NVIDIA's 4K-ready GeForce GTX 690 video card. Liquid cooling enables overclocking to 5 gigahertz without hurricane-force whirring that makes it sound like the CPU is about to blow. A 120-gigabyte solid-state drive (expandable to 1 terabyte) is standard, and up to 12 TB of hard-disk storage—enough for 1,000 high-def movies—is possible.

Wonder Window: An acrylic window consumes the top panel, revealing the PC's impressively neat innards. Price: $1,998 and up

↓ QUARKIE EARPHONES

Looking for original gift ideas? Quirky might be a better name for this brand of earphones, which offers several positively unique styles: Cat Eye (shown), Snake Eye, Chameleon Eye, (purple) Gemstone, and our favorite, the Rusty Bolt (shown). "We make serious headphones with studio-monitor sound quality—but we don't think they have to look boring" is how Quarkie's Asian/British design team describes its work. Available in four sizes—XS, S, M, and L—each model has an in-line mike/mute button and uses 0.5-inch "low-distortion, wide-frequency" drivers.

Vipers, Too: Oh, we forgot to mention the Viper Head earphone. Imagine a snake head protruding from your ear an inch or so with its tongue extended. That's just creepy. Price: $109
